	"Viewed from behind (and a little above) one of two onscreen tennis players, Grand Slam Tennis has a green playfield, white outlines of the court and a blue translucent net. The ball has a shadow to help players judge where it is on the court, and the game keeps score like real tennis. Serves, smashes and lobs are all part of the action, but the computer opponent is a pushover, meaning the two-player mode is preferred." - Brett Weiss.
